Dear Sir:

I wish to recommend to you for a charter from your fraternity, the group of young men who now form our college band. These young men are a fine lot of students. They are a credit to the University, and will be a credit to your fraternity.

The band is organized under faculty control and approval. The leader is Dr. W.H. Hyslop, one of our professors of physics. The band has the full approval of both the faculty and the students of the University. They are maintaining regular practice hours and are consistently attempting to improve their work.

The band is well-uniformed and makes a pleasing appearance on the field in the athletic contests. They are occasionally presenting complete programs before the general assembly.

I recommend them highly to you for this honor.

Yours truly,

Our Band has always been an active and progressive organization conducted on a high plane and I feel sure that a chapter of your fraternity on this campus would always be a credit both to the University and to Kappa Kappa Psi.

Gentlemen:

It gives me a great deal of very real pleasure to recommend most highly to you the local band organization called Psi Mu Epsilon on our campus, which I understand is petitioning for a chapter in your organization. As Dean of Men I have known the boys of Psi Mu Epsilon both individually and as a group; and I assure you that they are of an exceptionally high type in both respects. They maintain an excellent band organization and possess an interest in music aside from that attendant upon wearing a uniform and marching in a parade, which I think is to their credit. If granted a chapter from Kappa Kappa Psi, these boys would bring credit upon your organization. It is also true that the University of Denver would welcome the advent of your fraternity to our campus, and you may rest assured that we of the administrative staff will cooperate to the utmost extent.

Very truly yours,

Dear Sir:

I wish to add my endorsement to the petition of our local Band fraternity, Psi Mu Epsilon, for membership in Kappa Kappa Psi.

We have at the University of Denver a good musical organization that keeps up a fine enthusiasm and adds greatly to the morale of student body and faculty. The members of our Band have been good musicians as well as good students. We have been particularly proud of these young men, and they have been a real civic asset to Denver.

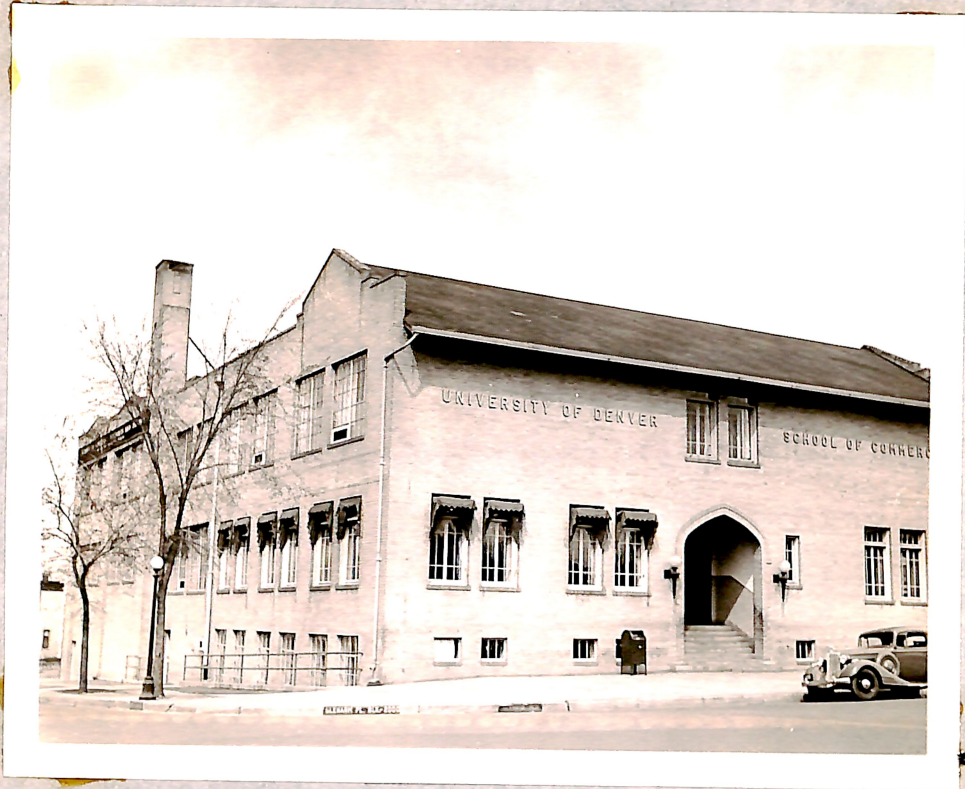

The high character of our Band men and their spirit is largely due to Professor Wm. H. Hyslop, Ph.D. Dr. Hyslop is a fine leader of orchestras and bands as well as an outstanding scientist. He has made the selection and training of these fine young people the main enthusiasm of his life and, therefore, he has made a very real contribution to the life of the University.

General Statement

The Charter of the Colorado Seminary was granted by the Council and House of Representatives of the Colorado Territory on March 5, 1864. The leader in this enterprise was Governor John Evans, appointed by President Abraham Lincoln as the second Governor of the Colorado Territory. A building was erected at Fourteenth and Arapahoe Streets, near the center of the business section of Denver, and school work was begun in the fall of 1864.

In 1880 the University of Denver was organized as the degree-conferring body of the Colorado Seminary. Dr. David H. Moore was elected as its first Chancellor. The College of Liberal Arts opened in the fall of 1880, and during the next two years schools of Medicine, Music, Art, Business, and a Preparatory School were established. Changing conditions in Denver and Colorado caused the organization of various schools and colleges under the University of Denver and permitted the discontinuance of some. The institution now includes the Graduate School, the College of Liberal Arts, the School of Law, the School of Commerce, Accounts, and Finance, the School of Science and Engineering, the School of Fine Arts, and the School of Librarianship, and the Dept. of Social Work. The Summer School, the City College, the Foundation for the Advancement of the Social Sciences, the Bureau of Business and Social Research, and the Extension Division are included in the general organization.

The University of Denver is accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools as a degree-granting institution. Other organizations which have accredited the University of Denver, or with which it is affiliated, are;

- Association of American Universities.
- Association of American Colleges.
- Association of Urban Universities.
- Association of American Law Schools (School of Law).
- Association of Schools of Professional Social Work (Graduate Department of Social Work).
- American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business. (School of Commerce, Accounts, and Finance).
- American Council of Education.
- Board of Education of Librarianship of the American Library Association. (School of Librarianship).
- Council on Legal Education. (School of Law).
- National University Extension Association. (Extension Division).

LOCATION

The Graduate School, the College of Liberal Arts, the School of Science and Engineering, and their summer schools are located on the campus at University Park, which is in the southeastern section of the city of Denver and may be reached by the University Park cars. Near the campus are found the Chamberlain Astronomical Observatory, the University Stadium, and the fraternity house quadrangle.

The School of Law is located at 211 15th Street. This is in the business section of Denver and is easily accessible from all parts of the city. Satisfactory class and lecture rooms, offices, and a large library are provided. Gifts from the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Haish and from other donors are being held as the nucleus of a fund for the erection of a new building for the future housing of the Law School.

The School of Commerce, Accounts, and Finance is housed in its building at the corner of Glenarm Place and Twentieth Avenue. In addition to many class and lecture rooms the building contains business offices, a library, society and club rooms, and a large gymnasium. The location is within a few minutes walk of the business center of Denver and is also easily reached by street cars. Both day and evening classes in accounting, economics, business administration, statistics, and commercial education are taught.

The School of Fine Arts is located in the Chappell House at 1300 Logan Street. This is the Art Center of Denver. It has its own art collection, and many loan collections are each year exhibited here.

The School of Librarianship is located at 1511 Cleveland Place. This is near the Denver Public Library and the Library in the State Capitol Building. The school has its own library and is well equipped to teach library management.

The City College of the University of Denver was organized to give further opportunity to the citizens of Denver to secure the courses and studies taught in the College of Liberal Arts. The classes are taught in the evenings and on Saturday to accommodate people who are employed during the day. Through the courtesy of the Denver Board of Education these classes meet in the East Denver High School.

LIBRARIES

The Mary Reed Library was completed during the autumn of 1932 and is now in use. It is a very beautiful building in collegiated Gothic architecture and embodies the best principles in library construction. It has four stories, and a tower which is more than a hundred feet in height. The stack rooms have a capacity of more than 500,000 volumes. There are four large reading rooms- the reserve book room, the reference library and periodical room, the general reading room and the Renaissance reading room. Many special rooms and seminar rooms afford opportunities for study.

The School of Law, the School of Commerce, the School of Fine Arts, the School of Librarianship, and the Bureau of Business and Social Research have their separate libraries. More than 65,000 bound volumes are available in these libraries. In addition to the bound books there are files of six hundred current periodicals and about 10,000 pamphlets.

Several libraries in Denver are available to the students of the University. They are the Denver Public Library, containing over 300,000 volumes including special collections of art and engineering; the library of the State Historical Society, which preserves all books, periodicals, pamphlets, and manuscripts relating to Colorado; the State Library, with its large collection of documents, and the library of the Supreme Court.

THE CHAMBERLAIN ASTRONOMICAL OBSERVATORY

The Observatory was the gift of the late Mr. H.G. Chamberlain. It is situated four blocks from the college campus, at University Park. There are two stone buildings; the smaller of these, called The Students' Observatory, shelters a six-inch equatorial refractor made by Grubb of Dublin and a two-inch transit instrument.

The main building is 65 feet long and 50 feet deep and is constructed of red sandstone. It is crowned by an iron dome, the apex of which is more than 50 feet from the ground. The principal rooms in the building are the dome room transit room library, computing room director's office, clock room, janitor's quarters, and photographic room.

The twenty-inch equatorial refractor, which is the principal instrument, has adequately proved its efficiency. The object-glass is from the hands of Alvan G. Clark, and crown lens is reversible for photography. G. N. Saegmuller of Rochester, New York, was the maker of the mounting, which is of the highest order of mechanical excellence. The telescope is one of the largest and finest in the West, and is regularly employed in original research.

The subsidiary instruments are a four-inch steel meridian circle, a standard mean-time clock, a standard sidereal clock, chronometers, three chronographs, a sextant, and two solar transits. There is an excellent library containing all of the important star catalogues and astronomical periodicals.

UNIVERSITY CIVIC THEATRE

The University Civic Theatre is located in Margery Reed Mayo Memorial Hall. The auditorium, seating three hundred, with its curtains and draperies, is the gift of Mrs. Verner Z. Reed. The stage and lighting equipment is the gift of Mr. James H. Causey. Dressing rooms are provided under the stage for sixteen people. The equipment includes two studios- one for scene building and painting, and one for costume making.

By the initiative of the University and under its management, the University Civic Theatre was organized during the fall of 1929, and gave its first production in December of that year. Its purpose is to offer the theater-loving audience of Denver the enjoyment of worth-while plays well performed. The University Civic Theatre also desires to offer all citizens of Denver actively interested in the drama the opportunity of participating in the numerous functions connected with stage production. The Drama Club and the Department of Speech and Dramatic Arts present their productions in this theatre.

PLAY FESTIVAL AT CENTRAL CITY COLORADO

The 1934 Play Festival will be held in July and will again be under the direction of Robert Edmond Jones, one of the best known directors in America.

The play which has been chosen is Othello, with Walter Huston in the stellar role. Mr. Huston has just returned to the legitimate stage from Hollywood and has made a great hit in New York as Dodsworth in Sidney Howard's stage version of the Sinclair Lewis novel. Critics and the public are agreed in proclaiming him a great actor.

The Opera House at Central City was the first to be built in the Rocky Mountain country, and was, at the time it was completed in 1878, one of the finest theatres in America. It was presented to the University in 1932. Its reopening in July, 1932, was an event of great interest from both the dramatic and the historical standpoints.

Science Hall

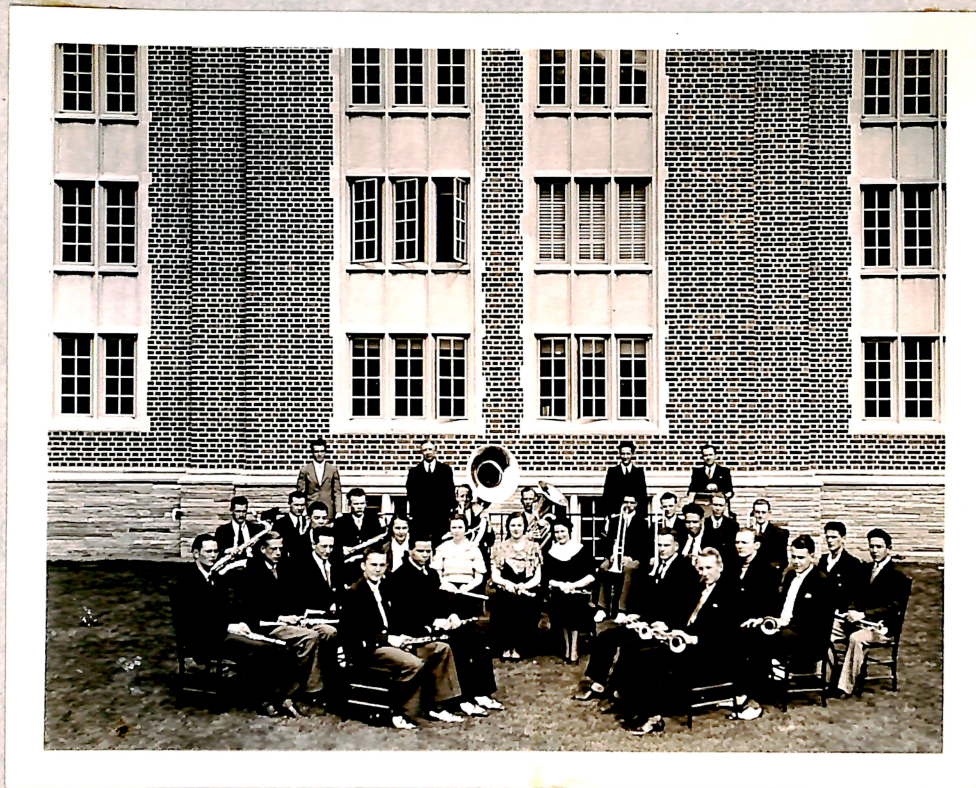

WILLIAM H. HYSLOP

The present conductor, Dr. W. H. Hyslop, has been in charge of the band since the Fall of 1923. The membership has increased from eighteen in 1924 to the present membership of forty. The instrumentation is now sufficient for the majority of the standard numbers.

Dr. Hyslop was a member of the orchestra and the band at the University of Illinois from 1915 to 1921, when he came to the University of Denver.

For five seasons he was a member of the Denver Municipal band, and has been the first horn player of the Civic Symphony Orchestra of Denver since its organization in 1923.

Dr. Hyslop also conducts the University of Denver orchestra, composed of fifty-three members, which presents from three to five symphonic concerts during the year. His ability as a conductor and leader of bands and orchestras is recognized by the entire community, as well as the University, and his popularity among student musical organizations is unexcelled.

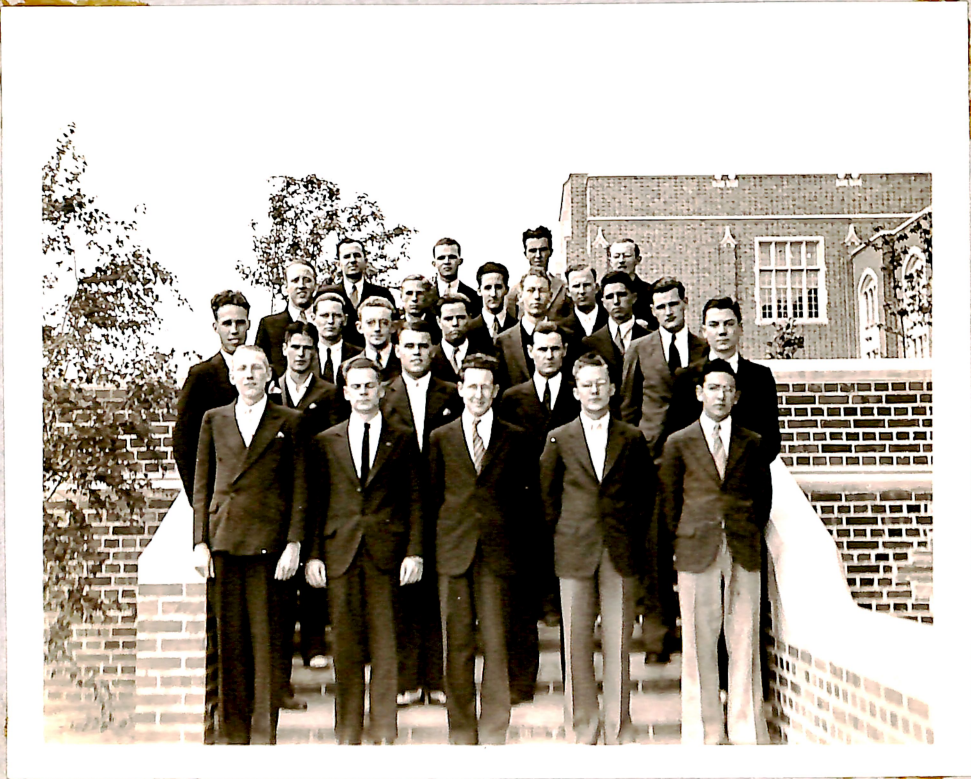

Band

HISTORY OF THE BAND

The band has been under faculty leadership continuously for the past eleven years. During this period the band has continued to function throughout the year for four years. This has come about because of the increasing ability and taste of the incoming Freshmen. The additional incentive offered by the participation in the activities of the intercollegiate band of the Rocky Mountain schools has also been a great help in keeping the organization intact.

The University of Denver has no R. O. T. C. unit from which the band could draw support, hence we are especially grateful to our colleagues of this region, particularly, the members of Kappa Kappa Psi, for their encouragement and cooperation.

With a sustaining enthusiasm for greater service to the University and this region, the members of the band are looking forward to greater accomplishment.

Gentlemen:

We, the members of Psi Mu Epsilon, local band fraternity of the University of Denver, herewith submit this petition to you for earnest consideration of our sincere desire for a chapter of Kappa Kappa Psi on our campus.

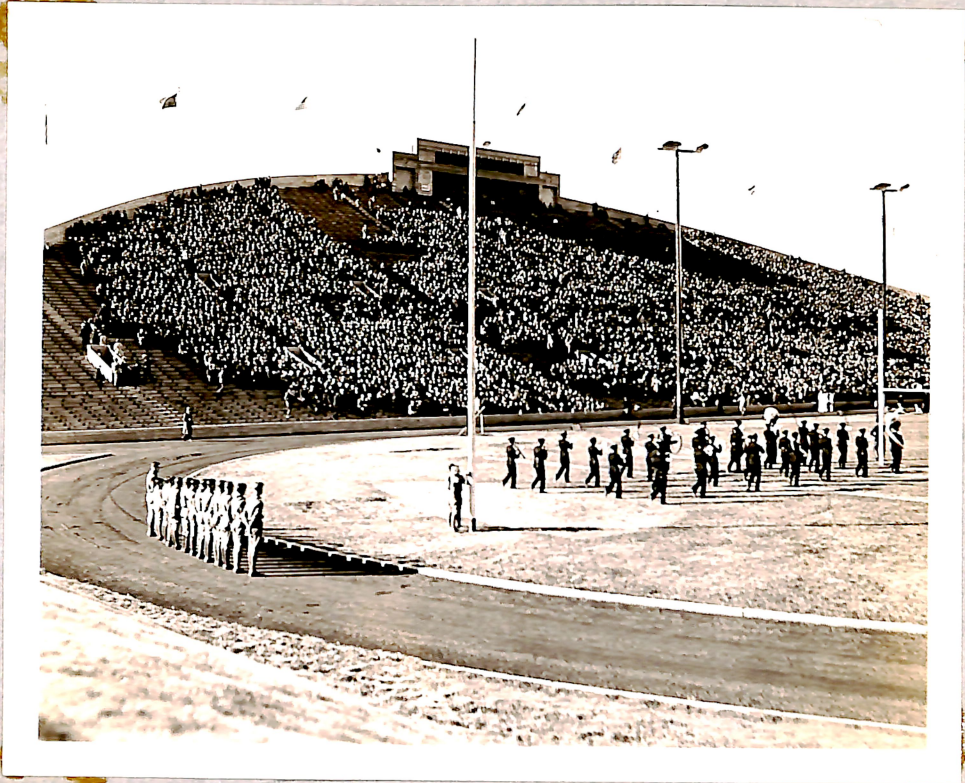

The petition contains the recommendations of the Chancellor and other administrative officers of the University which will give evidence of our sincerity in this effort. You will find a history of the institution and of the band, also interesting sidelights of activity with which you are concerned.

Every member of Psi Mu Epsilon is anxious to see a chapter of the national organization established in Denver. It will give music a much needed impetus on the campus and will give the bandmen encouragement to greater service for our school. We pledge ourselves to make Kappa Kappa Psi the most important honorary fraternity upon the campus by making our band live up to the high standard which you expect of us. To do otherwise would be to betray the trust we hope you will place in us. To this end, the petition committee humbly submits this evidence of its honest and sincere ambition.

Very sincerely yours,
